May I present "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat?" They are Isabel Scott Rorick's two charming young people who are going to give those perennial favorites, the Nick Charles (of Thin Man fame) a run for their money. The substitute of "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat," is "The Record of a Happy Marriage."

Mrs. Cugat, Liz to her friends, is blonde and small but tough as a turtle. She eats salted peanuts by the bushel and she loves cats. Her best inspirations come while she is soaking in the bathtub amid the vapors of Yardley's lavender. To be sure, she isn't very profound as her reflections never go much beyond wondering why a cigar gives an air of substance to a man over fifty and makes a man under forty look like a horse trader. Liz has one talent that gets her into hot water—once she begins spinning tall stories she never knows when to stop.

George Cugat is a dear, but most wives will have to admit that he just too much of a good thing. Yet it is entirely probable that many husbands will swear that they would be exactly like George if their wives would only let them.

The Cugats move in the circle of country clubs, vacations in Bermuda, pheasants in cream, champagne cocktails and mink coats. But you won't find them in the least exclusive. Their adventures are the kind that most young married people share. These adventures are ingeniously titled by phrases taken from the marriage ceremony. Certainly Mrs. Rorick deserves orchids, bouvardias and gardenias for this clever touch.

In "Forsaking All Others" George meets an old flame. Liz smugly accompanies him to the Country Club expecting to find the lady early Clara Bow, but the lady turns out to be late Hedy Lamarr. Liz goes out to pick up a bargain in a little knit suit in "For Richer or for Poorer" and comes home with a Schiaparelli coat and to a reckoning with her check book. In "To Have and To Hold" Gary Cooper's hat makes all the trouble.

"And to Obey" is a humdinger, a wow, a pippin, or what you will. Liz, alas, is not free from that moral blemish of wanting to impress her friends, in plain prose of "showing off." Her friends the Coreyells "smooch" there ever were any, have bagged a social lion—a cricket player who has the distinction of having his picture in Town and Country magazine. Liz must entertain the Coreyells and their guest and show them what she can do.

She plans one of those flawless dinners of a deceiving simplicity—this is where the pheasants in cream come in—and everything goes swimmingly until an hour before dinner. George telephones that he is bringing home an important customer from the bank. Liz is a contained young person but she does have her private tantrum as she is having a leaf added to the dining room table.

A subdued George comes in late followed by the customer who looks like Dopey the dwarf, plus wife and sister who are wearing new dresses and feel like a party. Now sister with a few Martinis is a riot but champagne develops her into a furore. She does a parody on "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" while Liz suffers those peculiar pangs known to mortified hostesses. But the climax, and a neat one it is, comes the next day. We won't spoil your fun by telling you about it.

No, this book is no realistic facing of life. It is a book about the agreeable cavortings of the upper crust and a grand lark it is. If your spirits are in need of a lift—and whose are not in these days, do read "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat."

If you belong to the fellowship of books which is really a league of the spirit and the members recognize one another quite as easily as the members of fraternal organizations recognize one another, you will want to read Vincent Starrett's "Book Alive." This is not written to inform or to inspire primarily, its chief aim is to delight the reader. You will find it doesn't fall short. We like Mr. Starrett's simple definition of a good book: "It is safe to say that a good book is a book that lives on, year after year, generation after generation, without appreciable loss of popularity."

The La Vida Bottling Corporation has brought suit against George F. Hill and two Doe defendants, claiming $1212.01 as owing for goods supplied within the past four years.

DRAFT QUERIES ARE ISSUED TUESDAY

Total Of 130 Men Will Get Questionnaires; Advisory Board Ready

Proceedings under the Selective Service Act of 1940 as it relates to El Dorado County moved forward again during the weekend with the posting in the corridor of the post-office of the names, serial numbers and order numbers of El Dorado County selective service registrants. It was announced Tuesday morning at the headquarters of the selective service board, Room 1 in the basement of the postoffice, that the first group of questionnaires would be sent out Tuesday. They will go to the first twenty-five order numbers on the list.

Daily until a total of about 130 have been sent out, the questionnaires will go forward in batches of twenty-five.

For the convenience of men who are receiving questionnaires, it is announced that the advisory draft board will be in session daily at the War Veterans Memorial Building, starting Wednesday, November 13th, from one o'clock until five in the evening.

Men who require assistance in filling out their questionnaires are returned to the selective service board, the registrants will receive from the board notices of their classification and will be subsequently notified of the time and place to appear for physical examination.

The board Tuesday announced that two more registrants have volunteered for service, bringing the total to nineteen for the county. James Raymond has volunteered for service in the army, and Eldon Flannagan has volunteered for service in the Navy.

Dr. W. A. Rantz, chairman of the board, said Tuesday that the board has been advised a quota of two men will be called from the county on November 18th.

Senior Play Is Well Received

Comedy Offering Maintains Standard Of Excellence In Friday Night Presentation

The annual play of the Class of '41 at the county high school was well received by a large and appreciative audience at the school auditorium on Friday evening.

The offering was "Mistakes at the Blakes," a comedy, prepared for presentation under the guidance of Thomas Flynn, of the school faculty. The school art department, under the leadership of Mrs. C. Belle Swansborough; the mechanics department, directed by Sylvio Ronzone; and the orchestra, led by Charles W. Ball, all contributed to the support of the very competent cast of players.

Those who took part are James Holt and Angus Sloan, Sidney Price, Eleanor Swift, Maxine Miller, Bill Dillingier, Marilyn Wiley, Doris Toombs, Bob Weidman, Gordon Flisk, Caroline Wallace, Doris Onetti, Bob Allen and, last but not least, Karl Herrman.

Herrman was the "dog," and although his part was a bit, his was a mighty important part. Director Flynn had hoped to use a real dog in the part, but experimentation revealed that a dog has its own ideas about when and where to bark.

An appeal to the student body was followed by tests in which Karl Herrman's "bark" won him the part.

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE DATE SET FOR DEC. 17-18 AT STOCKTON

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—The annual California Agricultural Economic Conference will be held in Stockton on Dec. 17 and 18 to be followed on the 19th by the annual fall conference of county agricultural commissioners, Director of Agriculture W. B. Parker announced.

Parker said it was planned to invite all California agricultural organizations, committees, associations and groups to give an opportunity for public expression of their views on possible agricultural legislation prior to the convening of the legislature in January.

COUGARS END GRID YEAR

San Juan Takes Armistice Day Game, 25 To 0; Hoop Season Opens Nov. 28th

San Juan high school's juggernaut rolled over the Cougars in the annual Armistice Day game at San Juan Monday by a score of 25 to 0, leaving the Cougars with a season's record of seven defeats in seven starts.

El Dorado High scored 18 points to their opponents' 153, and they emerged on top of the heap but once, in an early season practice scrimmage with Brete Harte High School.

Against San Juan, as against all other adversaries, the Cougars found themselves outclassed in size and experience, since most of their first string players were freshmen and sophomores, while the other teams boasted of all-senior line-ups. This will give the locals the edge next year, however, for they will have an experienced team and their present conquerors will have to start from scratch.

The Cougars, although lacking the services of Homer Castonia due to injuries last Saturday, held the big red machine to a half-time six to nothing lead. San Juan, capitalizing on the El Dorado passing attack, made three touchdowns on pass interceptions, traveling about seventy yards on one play, and thirty on the others.

The Sacramento county lads uncorked a razzle-dazzle double lateral and forward pass on the last play of the first half which was finally broken up by Gibbs on the Cougar one-yard line, after the play had traveled about fifty yards. Most of San Juan's gains were made around end or through tackle, however.

With the first basketball game scheduled for November 28, Coach Brown is worried over the injuries of two of his better prospects, Homer Castonia, who was hurt in the Sonora game, and Wesley Gray, who had his ankle broken in the last minute of play at San Juan.

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized abandonment by the Southern Pacific Co. of approximately 15 miles of branch line between Los Gatos and Olympia, California.

Trains have not been operated on this route since February, 1940, when the track was damaged by storm.

The ICC said railroad officials estimated the cost of rehabilitating the track at $84,577.

ARMISTICE DAY RITES HELD ON MONDAY

Anniversary Observed As Holiday; Stores And Offices Closed

The twenty-second anniversary of the World War armistice was observed Monday in the community with principal stores and offices closed for the day.

Although numbers of residents took advantage of the two-day weekend holiday to make visits to other points, the parade and the exercises which followed attracted general participation.

The Armistice Day observance had been arranged by El Dorado Post No. 119, American Legion, and had opened on Friday afternoon when members of the American Legion visited schools of the county to address the pupils concerning Armistice Day. Saturday evening the annual dance of the post was held at the Shakespeare Club house.

On Monday the community observance took its usual form with a procession forming at 10:30 o'clock in the morning on Main Street opposite the War Veterans' Memorial building. In the line of march were the high school and members of the American Legion, their auxiliary, Sons of the American Legion, representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and of the Spanish American War Veterans, members of other civic and fraternal organizations, Boy Scouts and school children.

The procession led to the auto parking lot on Main Street opposite the bell tower, where the Armistice Day exercises were conducted from an improvised platform.

District Attorney Henry S. Lyon, Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West and a member of the American Legion post, was the speaker of the day. Mr. Lyon pointed out the ideals which had called the country to arms twenty-three years ago and noted that in (Continued on Page Three)

SHINGLE MAN CHARGED WITH MURDER IN WIFE'S DEATH

Woman Slain Friday Evening At Home of Friends; Small Girl In Mother's Arms Is Wounded Slightly In Shower of Shots

Antone Moline has indicated he will plead guilty to charges he murdered his wife, District Attorney Henry S. Lyon said Monday. The defendant, Mr. Lyon said, has "freely admitted the shooting." The preliminary hearing in the matter has been set for Thursday.

By DON VEERKAMP

George M. Smith and District Attorney Henry S. Lyon were summoned. Moline left the house and walked to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scheiber, nearby, where he talked with the latter on the porch for some time. Scheiber was not home at the time. When officers approached a few minutes later Mrs. Scheiber walked into the house followed by the murderer. Lyon and Smith disarmed Moline, who offered no resistance. He was lodged in the county jail.

Scheiber reported the man had spent about an hour with him at the store in Shingle just previous to the shooting. The storekeeper said he and Moline had been friends for twenty years, and during the visit Friday evening nothing unusual was noted in his actions. He apparently went directly to the Belmont home after leaving Scheiber at closing-up time.

Reporters and photographers who visited the scene Saturday morning saw what some observers declared a "scene from Tobacco Road." Witnesses to the previous night's shooting welcomed newsmen, talking freely of the affair and for the benefit of photographers and reporters, re-enacting the shooting with considerable "dramatic touch."

Moline, himself appeared little perturbed when taken from his jail cell Saturday afternoon. He stated that he was 70 years old last June. Born in Amador county the Indian said, "I was raised by white folks." He willingly posed for pictures.

Neighbors and others who claimed to have known the family for some time, declared they frequently had quarreled and on one occasion the husband was said to have called for officers, declaring his wife was crazy and should be "taken away." Among those who were witnesses of figured in some way in the "unofficial dramatization" were Mrs. Bessie Tobey, her daughter, Nellie, aged about four; Dale Andre, Jake Lohmiller, Roscoe Shaw, Mrs. Moline's daughter, Alice; Mrs. Mabel Belmont and her daughter Irene. Frank Belmont was not home at the time.

The body of the victim is in charge of Coroner A. J. Orelli and a formal inquest will probably be held some time this week.

52 Killed In Cold Wave

California Only Major Section To Escape Nation-Wide Blasts

By UNITED PRESS

Snow and freezing weather clamped most of the nation in a wintry grip today as destructive gales which left at least 52 persons dead in the Midwest battered furiously at the eastern seaboard.

Winter's early invasion was the most severe in decades, causing uncounted millions of dollars' property damage across a broad belt of the central and southern sectors in addition to the heavy toll of human lives.

And the force of the storm—a terrifying compound of wind, snow and cold—was not spent. Fifty-mile-an-hour winds tore at property in New England and the Middle Atlantic states as temperatures dropped to freezing levels. Ice squalls and snow pounded at the Rocky Mountain region for the fourth day.

Only the California area escaped the storm's wrath, which swept in from the extreme northwest five days ago and howled to a costly course southeasterly, then northeasterly across the nation—sparring only isolated points.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Chicago continued cold, with snow flurries and frosty winds in the north central states.

NEWS PERSONALS

Frank Marra, employed at Bank of America, spent the weekend visiting with friends and relatives at Oakland and Belmont.

Mrs. Esther Ruth Matthis, of San Francisco, was cited by city officials during the weekend for drunken driving and upon examination by a physician was found to be intoxicated. She was released on bail of $200 to appear for trial on November 18.

George H. Vols left Tuesday for Stockton to attend the annual meeting of the California Farm Bureau Federation as director from this county.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Reeg devoted the weekend to a trip to Tijuana, Mexico, returning home over the beautiful and scenic coast route.

"ROULETTE of LOVE" by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

It has been a wonderful picnic, Lucinda Stanford enjoying every minute of it even though Howard Scott, the artist, persisted in proposing for the hundredth time. The party retreats to an old barn when a storm comes up. Someone puts a pail of water over the door intended for Bertie Sprigg, a sponger, but Lucinda gets soaked instead.
While her clothes are drying, she wraps herself in a gunny-sack and, tired out, falls asleep in the hay.
Later, the crowd goes off and leaves her, believing she has gone ahead in another car. Lucinda awakens at four o'clock the next morning and rushes from the barn terrified. Wealthy Carter Chalaire finds her by the roadside and takes her to his home. After a refreshing bath, and dressed in a pair of Carter's pajamas, Lucinda feels like Cinderella. Carter is greatly attracted. Suddenly, his mother appears in the doorway, a look of horror and disgust upon her face as she stares at Lucinda. Misunderstanding the reason for the girl's presence in the house at that hour, Mrs. Chalaire orders her out.
Carter takes Lucinda home. Bubbles, her gold-digging sister, is out and Lucinda has no key so she suggests that they go to Howard's studio where the picnic party had gone for breakfast. The party is still in full swing. Bubbles, sensing money, tries to flirt with Carter but he is entirely taken up with Lucinda.

CHAPTER V

"Who's your new boy-friend? He looks like money to me," Bubbles contrived to whisper to her, when Lucinda had run for a moment into a sort of little dressing-room where Howard kept brushes and combs and some make-up for his feminine guests.

Briefly, but without any mention of the disastrous interview with the boy's mother, Lucinda unfolded her adventure, while predatory Bubbles' eyes widened.

"A big mansion, you say? He had his own suite of rooms? An only son? Good heavens, Lucinda!
what a chance for you-for us both!"

"Hush. You sound so hard-boiled.
He might hear you. It would spoil everything."

"And his name's Carter? What's his given name?"

"That is. That's all I know. I never asked him. Carter Somebody-or-other."

"Lucinda, you're a fool. Haven't I told you the minute you meet an attractive man that's taken a shine to you, it's up to you to find out all you can about him? But you're the soft kind that lets the grass grow under her feet!"

"Well, go on and ask him yourself," Lucinda said, exasperated.
"Let him see what a gold-digger you are, and queer on our friendship at the start of it!"

"Aw, come with me myself. I was only talking for your own good,
Lucinda."

And Bubbles took her sister by the arm, and ran her back to the little kitchen where the young man was setting out the coffee cups.

"We want to take you out and introduce you to some of the gang.
What's the last name, please? It went right in at one ear and out at the other," Bubbles addressed him aloud.

"Chalaire. Carter Chalaire." He
grinned at her.

Bubbles' eyes opened to their full extent.

"Not the son of Jeremy Chalaire, the broker?"

"The very same."

"Why, of all coincidences!" Bubbles drew a deep and excited breath.
"Why, I know your father! He—he's charming! Why, of course, now
I see a sort of a family likeness!"

Three minutes later, she was whispering to Lucinda: "My goodness, to think that the son of old
'Poppy' Chalaire has fallen for you!
Why, it was Poppy who gave me this diamond pin—it was Poppy who tucked a hundred dollar bill in the table napkin of all us girls who came to that so-called stag dinner he gave last Spring! Poppy's a big shot on the Street and the most liberal sugar-daddy in the town! If Carter takes after Poppy, you're darn lucky!"

The party in Howard Scott's studio on West Ninth Street had been going on for hours.

To Lucinda—who had curled her self up on an old divan in the furthest corner, with handsome young Carter Chalaire beside her, both talking intently and intermi-nably—the time had flown by on wings of happiness.

Half hidden as they were by a big easel, and unconventional as the gathering was in any case, Carter held her hand in his, had given every indication of the attraction he felt for her.

"We talk the same language," he had said, over and over.

She had even fallen asleep once,
and had wakened to mocking shouts of "the gang," with her head on his shoulder and his arm about her.

"Let's razz the Babes in the Wood!" someone was calling.

But Bubbles, sympathetic for once, had shooed the gang off.

After Howard, the host, had "come to," drinks circulated freely for the entire party, with the exception of their Sunday afternoon nap. With adjectives like "disputing," "impertinent" . . . "drunken," they backed up the hall-porter and the secretary, who ordered the party off, hinting there would be trouble for Carter.

"The devil with him!" said Carter blithely, for with lovely Lucinda on his arm it would take more than a hall-porter and an officious secretary and a couple of old-fogey friends of his father's to upset him.

"I know the manager at S—s.
I'm going to take you all there for tea. He'll let us in."

It was four o'clock, that hour
"betwixt and between" late lunchon and tea. They poured into the smart restaurant on Park Avenue.
It had not filled yet. The manager

adjectives like "disputing," "impertinent" . . . "drunken," they

Black leopard-trimmed outfit.

By VERA WINSTON

THE WOOL frock with its own fur-trimmed jacket is one of the major town fashions this autumn and is shown in many lovely versions by every house. Here is a supremely well done ensemble of this type, fashioned of black wool, the dress with a top of gold-colored crepe. The form-fitting jacket has shaped tucks slanting down towards the waist from the neck-line. The leopard collar is draped becomingly about the neck and shoulders. An off-the-face leopard hat completes the picture.

Armistice Day Kept Monday

the present world situation the nation is again engaged in defense preparations to uphold those same ideals. He declared that the Nation must be prepared, not only in defense plans, but each citizen in his own heart, to defend those ideals.

The exercises were conducted with Frank Irwin as master of ceremonies, assisted by Paul R. Smith, American Legion commander.

The program opened with a prayer by the post chaplain, Rev. Harold Morehouse, followed by the pledge of allegiance, led by the Sons of the American Legion and a selection by the band.

James Ticksman, a high school senior, recited a poem, "In Flanders Fields," and the chairman introduced the guests of the day who included the American Legion commander, District Attorney Lyon, Mrs. Lotta Kyburz, who recited an original poem; R. L. McLennan, commander of the Spanish War Veterans; Mrs. Jessie Watt, president of the American Legion Auxiliary; and Clyde Longhurst, captain of the Sons of the American Legion.

The roll call of departed comrades was followed by a selection by the band and the address of the day, following which the program closed with the benediction.

The exercises were halted precisely at eleven o'clock and all stood in reverent silence in respect to the memory of the World War dead as the bell in the tower on the plaza tolled the hour. The bell was tolled by Charles E. Hand who, as sheriff of the county twenty-two years before, had tolled the bell to announce to the community the signing of the Armistice. Mr. Hand has officiated in this capacity on each succeeding Armistice Day.

THE SPIRIT OF

by JOHN CLINTON

My doctor friend across the street is a skeptic. He doesn't even believe in a golf score.

And he's been ragging me about "Traffic Nerves!" He was willing enough to grant that traffic driving was a pain in the neck, and that it could send your pulse way up. "But," he says, "show me how 76 can do anything about that!"

So, I told him to wait till his gas tank had about a gallon left in it. "Then," says I, "drive in and have 'em filled clear to the brim with New 76 Gasoline, and pick me up and let's go for a drive."

So the doc hopped this morning, and I had him hunt up the toughest traffic in town—the kind that makes even tough truck drivers timid. "Now, doc—observe. And be honest. Tell me if your hack doesn't behave better in this mess than it used to. If it doesn't, I'll pay you what I owe you!"—I told him.

Well, after about a mile of it, he grins at me and says: "John, I believe you've got something here. I can actually feel the difference!" Well—to make a long story short—New 76 Gasoline is specially brewed for Traffic Driving.

While it won't grow hair or remove freckles, it will give you the doggondest wallop in traffic you ever got out of gas. But—wait till the tank's almost empty so you can get the full effect of it. It's worth trying, believe me!

Greece Captures the Spotlight of the War

This map shows the new theatre of war in the Mediterranean area. The British fleet assembled at Salonika (A) to help Greece repel the Italian invasion. Florina (1) and Kastoria (2) were shelled by Italian troops advancing from Albania, while Piraeus (B), port of the capital city of Athens, suffered intensive attack from the air. Greek and Italian fleets were reported battling as Italy sought to seize Crete (D). Extension of the war gives the British navy use of bases at Cerigo (C) and in the Cyclades (E).

MUSSOLINI'S MOVES POINT TO AMBITIONS FOR ENCIRCLEMENT OF NORTHERN PORTION OF GREECE, SAYS EXPERT

By J. W. T. MASON
United Press Staff Expert

Intensifying Italian air raids on Metsovo in the Pindus mountains east of Janina and Larissa on the important railway junction near the southern border of the Gulf of Salonika give some indication of the strategic purpose of Mussolini's Greek campaign. An attempt to encircle the northern half of Greece is the ambitious aim of the Italian general staff.

The pressure of the Italians on the Janina front has become the primary move of this plan. If Janina falls to the Italians, they will then be in a position to swing eastward along the only good road crossing the Pindus Mountains, separating northwestern Greece from the less rugged northeastern terrain.

Metsovo guards the road from the eastern Pindus approach, and after Janina should become the next Italian objective. Once across the Pindus range, the Italians would have a fairly level road running to Kalagaka, terminus of the only east-west railway in northern Greece, which is not yet wholly completed.

This railway near Larissa crosses the main railway line connecting Salonika with Athens and southern Greece. Once astride the main railway the Italians could then swing northward, severing Salonika and the entire half of northern Greece from the rest of the country.

For this plan of campaign to succeed, the Italian right flank would first have to be protected along the western seacoast. This seems to be one of the purposes of the Italian operations in the Kalamas River area near Corfu. Too, it would be necessary to interrupt Greek reinforcements and supplies being transported to Salonika through the Aegean Sea.

If these very difficult accomplishments were successful, Mussolini would be in a position to dominate northern Greece as completely as Hitler controls Rumania. But the plan calls for much more vigorous operations and a more intense and continuous offensive than the Italians have yet shown in their Greek campaign.

They have been fighting now for nearly a fortnight and have advanced scarcely one-half the distance of thirty miles separating Janina from the Albanian frontier. Once in Janina they would have more than 100 miles to go before reaching Larissa. Their extreme northern drive toward Salonika has had to give up ground and is now backed some distance into Albania, where their advance base at Koritza is threatened.

Based on the showing thus far made by the Italians, it is difficult to believe they can be sure of the success of their encirclement plans before the coming winter adds to the defensive strength of the mountain barriers. If the Italian high command were able to send heavy reinforcements into Greece, the situation might change, though there is a limit to the number of troops that can be used along the mountainous front.

British aerial bombardment of the Italian disembarkation ports in Albania adds to the complexities facing the Italians. It will require military leadership of the highest order for the Italians to accomplish their final purpose. Whether that exists among the Roman generals is yet to be shown. The Greeks have fair reason for believing that complete Italian victory is not automatically assured.

"NEXT TIME WE LOVE" HAS INTERNATIONAL SETTINGS, CAST

The setting and cast of "Next Time We Love," have an international flavor like a dinner served in the restaurant of the League of Nations at Geneva. The Universal film, starring Margaret Sullivan, will be shown at the Empire Theatre tonight only.

The picture opens in New York. Then the scene changes to Russia, Siberia, China, Rome and the Tyrolean Alps. Sequences take place on a Swiss train, as well as Italian and Japanese steamers. Another part of the story is laid in Hollywood.

These various localities are important to the story, which relates the adventures of a wife who is a screen and stage star, and a husband who is a foreign newspaper correspondent pursuing big news in the strange corners of the earth.

Margaret Sullivan was born in Virginia and so was the director, E.

WILLKIE RADIO ADDRESS INDICATES HE WILL BE AS 'UNUSUAL' AFTER DEFEAT AS DURING HEATED PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

By WILLIAM H. LAWRENCE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP) — Wendell L. Willkie has begun work on a message to the more than 20,000,000 persons who voted for him on the role he believes they should play in President Roosevelt's third term.

He gave every indication that he would be as unusual as a defeated presidential nominee as he was a candidate.

He obtained 30 minutes on all three networks — NBC, CBS, and MBS—at 10:30 p. m. Monday to tell the nation which would not elect him President, how he intends to continue a "crusade" for governmental policies which differ in many respects from those advocated by Mr. Roosevelt, whom the voters gave another term.

Thousands of those who voted for Willkie have written to urge him to keep up the fight against the New Deal. Many of these letters were bitter. They appealed to Willkie to devise some means of translating the policies he advocates into action.

Excerpts from this mail, selected at random by this correspondent with Willkie's permission, said:

New York City Resident: "What are we to do now? Must those of us who believe in your 'crusade' just sit and let nature (the administration) take its course? The cry is for a united country, and we all agree that in union there is strength, but must we quietly acquiesce to a leadership whose judgment and intellectual integrity we distrust? Is there any way that the millions of your supporters can exert any influence? You aroused many of us out of our political lethargy... what can we do? If anything, I want to be in on it?"

Pelham, N. Y. Resident: "I am afraid this is much more serious than just another election. I am rolling up my sleeves to begin the fight! Please continue with the same fire and spirit, working against every dictatorial measure and crackpot scheme that will arise from the New Deal and please, oh please, don't accept any post with the New Deal... we are still with you, and we have just begun to fight."

There were some letters which urged him to cooperate with the administration, even to accepting a post with the administration, even to accepting a post in the government if he is offered one by Mr. Roosevelt, Willkie's aides said.

The only precedent for Willkie's talk to the nation as a defeated presidential nominee, was Alfred E. Smith's 1928 address to the democratic party urging it to remain

"alive and vigorous" but counseling democrats not to let "bitterness, rancor or indignation over the result blind us to one outstanding fact: That, above everything else, we are Americans."

Soviet Premier Meets Hitler

doggedly hewed to their tasks of war, raiding the great Italian naval base at Taranto for the first time by air and aiding their Greek allies to smash at disorganized Italian troops in the frontier mountains of northern Greece.

The British view of the conference was that whatever its result it probably would be bad news for England. One thing was generally assumed—British efforts to wean the Soviet away from Germany now have little prospect of success.

Greeks reported fresh successes in their resistance to the Italian invading elements on the northern frontier, and reports from Yugoslavia claimed that an attempted Italian attack on the Koritza front had apparently failed. The Greeks were said to have taken 11 or 12 officers and about 600 men prisoners in the last battles.

The Italians were said to be engaging in general bombing and machine-gunning of Greek towns and villages in a vain attempt to dent the Greek morale and again take the offensive.

Italy indignantly denied reports of failures in Greece, describing them as British propaganda, but the oily Italian report of operations in that theater concerned air attacks on Greek cities and the reported repulsing of a Greek counter-attack on the Kalibaki crossroads on the coastal front.

Today's Sport Parade

By Henry McElmore
United Press Staff Correspondent

DALLAS, Tex., (UP)—You've heard the ol' saying about how men are in Texas.

Well, it's not true; don't let those cowboy songs convince you it. Forget the roundups and ranches, and like a little doggie get along to the record.

The biggest men in Texas, the most he-mannish men, play football. They play for SMU, TCU, Arkansas, Baylor, the Texas Aggies, Rice, and Texas. Yet, since the Southwest Conference was organized, no school has been able to gather together enough men to win two championships in a row.

It is easy to win once, but the business of repeating is too much for the double-breasted, double chested men of the Lone Star State.

That is why in Dallas the Southern Methodist Mustangs were given a very sound chance of beating the Texas Aggies last Saturday—which they didn't.

The Aggies are national champions. Up to Saturday they had won 17 straight games against all opposition—and now it stands at 18. They have won nine straight conference victories. They are sparked by a man who is considered to be one of the finest—if not the finest—football players in the country; namely, John Kimbrough.

SMU is just another squad in the national football picture. True, the Mustangs have not been beaten, but they were tied by Pittsburgh, which everyone admitted was a mediocre ball club, even before they were beaten by Fordham which was beaten by a sickly St. Mary's.

The country may have thrown over the third term precedent, but in Texas the second term precedent still was strong—they didn't believe it could be done.

Down here they just couldn't believe that the Aggies would do something that never has been done before. Perhaps I should explain that the Aggies do not automatically win the Southwest Conference championship even though they are victorious over SMU. They still have Texas and Rice to hurdle, but those who have seen Rice and Texas play say that a one-legged man carrying the Queen Mary's Anchor could clear them with fathoms to spare.

Now, for a moment, let us get analytical. Every child knows what the Aggies have, so let us discuss what SMU was supposed to have to throw against these monsters from a place called College Station.

To start with, they have Madison

(Matty) Bell, a man who even as he moans his troubles, works on a defense that puts leg-irons on you.

In the backfield, he has, among others, one Jresto Johnson—a good runner, a fair passer and a great kicker. He was the boy who booted one 92 yards against Pitt.

At the passing position, Matty has the best pair of passers in the U. S. No other team can produce a combination such as Johnny Clement and Ray Malouf.

Matt's blocking back, Will Mullenweg, needs only 12 more pounds of weight to be as good a blocker as the Aggies' Thomson, and in Bobby Brown at quarter, Bell has a smarter boy than the Aggies' Fugh, even if he can't pass as well.

SMU has no line, and it doesn't have a man on it that you'll ever see on this year's all-America.

So, you see, the Aggies should have been a definite favorite. But in Dallas you had only to turn
